

Memories of Mother and Dad-
Alta's Clubs in Lehi

By Rhea Wanlass Lewis

Mother belonged to a couple of clubs, one was the Liahona club of which she was the President. She also belonged to a book club and would take turns "reading" a book for the members. She would "cut" the book, to pick out the most important parts, kind of like a condensed book and would give the story at the club. I remember her telling "Patrick Calls me Mother" and "Who Walks Alone". She would practice on us kids by giving us the book.

Mother also enjoyed playing bridge at club with her women friends. They would take turns having club at each other's home. Dessert or a small lunch would be served and prizes given for the winners at each of three tables. Mother enjoyed getting pretty matching tablecloths and napkins and tally cards.

The last club she had at her house, I helped her get it ready because she just couldn't do it alone. It was soon after that they dissolved the club.
